Our solar panels have been installed in many places around the world and the applications are endless. We have provided roofs to residential and commercial customers, backyards to city parks, brown fields in rural areas, and roofs and backyards to private campuses and military bases. The list goes on and on. We have now also begun to install solar panels in a wide range of sports fields, schools, and now community athletic facilities. These installations provide a wide array of needs including providing electricity or light for sports fields, for refridgeration, and for emergency back up. SolarCity is very proud of our installation on the Sports Illustrated Sports Campus at the University of Southern California. Not only did we create the largest solar installation in the world for a university with more than 14,000 students and faculty, we also created over 1000 units of renewable energy per year to help the campus reduce its carbon footprint. Amongst all our many installations, perhaps none is more important than the solar panels that will be installed on the roof of the Holy Cross School in Texas. The School needs at least two thirds of its electricity supply come from renewable sources to meet the state requirements. The school is also committed to its students learning the importance of renewable energy. Christian Brothers Academy in Los Angeles needs at least 50,000
