• Offseason opportunities abound for Indy Eleven's U-23 side • Indios striker Arboleda sets sights on senior team Leonardo Chavez's Indy Eleven are ready to embark on their second season under the guidance of head coach Tim Hankinson and fitness coach Arian Chapa. On Saturday, just over a week into the Major League Soccer preseason, the Indy Eleven's U-23 team began a series of friendly matches against top North American clubs. Out of that, the Eleven will decide which players will be invited to train in front of the current first-team players. Seven of the 11 players on the roster have underlined their credentials as the likes of club veterans Hector Jimenez and Michael Amick have shown they still have plenty left in the tank at age 24. A total of 19 of the U-23 players are rookies and will have a chance to feature in the team's first match of the season on March 14 at Louisville City FC. "We have a bunch of really good players," said head coach Tim Hankinson. "We want to keep all of them here with us and not have to send some of them away. We want to keep this group together and give these guys a chance to continue to improve and eventually make it to the first team." Among the 11 players currently part of the U-23 squad are defenders Jermaine Hoilett, Seb Hines, Romario Williams and Brian Kelley; midfielders Kenney Walker, Diego Chara, Levi Houapeu and Luis Flores; and forwards Gerson Echeverry and Connor Tobin. Leading the way for the U-23 side will be their midfield of Chara, Williams and Walker, who have played with the U-23 team in the past. The long-term goal for the team remains training with the first team, and the Eleven's priority has been to maintain as many of the players as possible. "I think it is good that they are still here," said assistant coach Arian Chapa. "We have a good group and we will see what happens next. These are all the right guys for us to look at and see what they can bring to the team. Right now, the focus is not just on these guys. We are looking at what we have and how we will react to the preseason." The competition for playing time will be intense as the game roster is loaded with talent. Chapa anticipates time will be

In the oil and gas industry, floating production, storage, and offloading (FPSO) systems are in common use today. However, systems with large storage tanks that hold liquid hydrocarbons are difficult and expensive to construct and these systems require high maintenance and have reliability problems. Production wells from oil and gas are expensive to service and take a long time to develop. Pneumatic conveying systems have been employed as an alternative to the large tank storage and the common FPSO systems. Since the storage tanks used with pneumatic conveying systems are much smaller than storage tanks used with tank storage systems, there are no storage tank problems due to heat or corrosion. Small storage tanks are easier and less expensive to construct and build and maintenance is much less expensive than that of the large storage tanks. Also, pneumatic conveying systems require significantly less manpower than oil tankers to handle incoming hydrocarbons and dispense the hydrocarbons to a pipeline. A pneumatic conveying system utilizes a compressor to pressurize and create a flow of gas with a low viscosity. A pipeline conveys the gas to a tank, and upon reaching the tank, the gas is dispensed into the tank. The pressure of the gas and the volume of the gas supplied to the pipeline vary with the amount of oil to be pumped into the tank and with the amount of oil or other liquid to be removed from the tank. When oil or liquid has to be removed from the pipeline and the pneumatic conveying system the fluid is conveyed to a separator tank. The separator tank has a separator located in the bottom that separates the liquid from the gas. The liquid is transferred from the separator tank to a storage container while the gas is discharged into the atmosphere. Pneumatic conveying systems have many advantages over other systems. The cost of a pneumatic conveying system is typically about the same as for the pipeline. Also, the storage tank is filled by a compressor connected to the pipeline. The connection pipe between the pump and the pipeline does not have to store a significant amount of volume of oil or gas. A pump can easily be located in a close proximity to the pipeline. The pipeline can be pressurized to a relatively high pressure. The pipeline can be constructed from the tank location to the tank location to increase the pressure and avoid storing the gas or oil in the pipeline. Also, the pipeline can be operated in a pressure kill mode or a bypass mode which causes the fluid to
